READING

Spending summer holiday wisely with Ancient Egyptians

Ancient Egypt is fascinating with its pyramids lasted for centuries. Their dead were buried with more wealth than we can imagine. Suzy learnt that the ancient Egyptians enjoyed plant crops in the rich, black soil of the Nile river delta. Reliable crops fed Egyptians and gave them the time to develop their culture.

She used glue, tissue and newspaper to construct a mummy for exhibition. More interestingly, Suzy "mummified" an apple in Ancient Egyptian techniques. She also checked out Egyptian artifacts in museums with her teammates. They learnt to write their own names in hieroglyphics—the ancient Egyptian language. Suzy was absolutely overjoyed by this enriching experience.

Suzy is one of those kids who will not spend her summer holiday in front of the TV. She is attending a unique summer history club and this week she was off to "Ancient Egypt".

Great! Right? I am glad I saw it on the big screen, I am impressed.

I don't think so. But we have no alternative.

What about? Don't worry like one time, I regret I did not click another one.

Great! The screen is really big!

WRITING

Mr. Burns

I got on the bus this morning. It was pretty crowded but I was still able to find a seat and sat down. Very soon, I saw an old woman getting onto the bus. She had a bag of things with her. She stood next to me. It seemed to me that she had difficulty standing on the bus. I gave her my seat. She thanked me nicely. Helping her made me feel very good for a whole day.

How to put simple sentences together

To make your writing more fun and nicer to read, you can join simple sentences together using special words called conjunctions.

e.g. 'I hate curry.' is a simple sentence.
'I like Thai food.' is also a simple sentence.
They can be put together like this:
'I hate curry' + but + 'I like Thai food' = 'I hate curry but I like Thai food.'

These are conjunction examples: and, as, but, or, so
Now please decide which of the following is a question.

Q1. She is beautiful. She is tall.
 She is beautiful and tall. ✓
 She is beautiful or tall.
