Helping the Handicapped

pause stop eng-class.com

Emily used to be afraid to look at people in wheelchairs. She didn't understand why they couldn't walk and she felt sorry for them. Now that she has spent time with people in wheelchairs, she understands them much better. They may have disabilities that place them in wheelchairs, but they also have feelings like everyone else too.

Emily has learned that people in wheelchairs appreciate being treated with courtesy, just like any regular person. Now, when she sees someone in a wheelchair, Emily will greet them and say "hello" if it seems appropriate. Emily wishes the whole world would learn to accept handicapped people, without being afraid of them for Grandpa dear can you hear?

 Grandson dear can you speak into my ear?
 Next year when I see Dr. Spears, I will need to check into treating my troubled ear,
 so I can hear you loud and clear.
